MSc in Management and Conservation of Biodiversity, Eduardo Mondlane University

Objectives:

The general objective of the course is to train specialists in environmental issues to identify and solve biodiversity related problems especially on biodiversity loss, environmental impacts of agrarian and related activities, thus contributing to the sustainable development.

Structure and content:

The program is organized in curricular activities (2 semesters) followed by research activities extended over 2 semesters.

Year 1

During the first two semesters the students are exposed to different subjects such as:

- 1- Conservation biology
- 2- Protected areas management
- 3- Climate changes and forests
- 4- Restoration of degraded ecosystems
- 5- Fire ecology and management
- 6- Remote sensing and
- 7- Geographical Information Systems
- 8- Presentation of the research proposals

Year 2

- 1- Research development
- 2- Labour-market
- 3- Thesis defence

Total credits: 120